Wireless elegant design | Steel housing | 14 000 punctures per minute | 5 speed levels

The skin is punctured automatically in a pulsating manner. The resulting damage stimulates the activity of fibroblasts, i.e. connective tissue cells. Stimulated fibroblasts produce more collagen and elastin, causing an increase in the number of fibers in the skin. The result is a significant improvement in microcirculation and tissue oxygenation. The tension of the skin increases noticeably, facial wrinkles begin to reduce, and the oval and contour of the face are noticeably improved.
